Terrace® Retires Its Seattle Competitors

This Seattle company provides resort-style living for seniors in the western U.S., so when they moved their headquarters to a prestigious downtown Seattle location, they wanted their environment to be sophisticated, yet enjoyable. With a little help from Terrace and a lot of creativity, they found the upscale blend of fun and function that reflects their culture.

Reasons for Success When the backdrop of an office includes the Space Needle, Mt. Rainier, Puget Sound, and downtown Seattle, it's all about the aesthetics. They were looking for a system that would not block the incredible views from their 19th floor offices. Terrace's ability to be configured in 120° arrangements with 56" panels meant none of the sightlines to the windows are blocked. Further enhancing the open look and feel, the acrylic upper tiles allow natural light to pass through the space.

"The 120° really opened the workstation configuration. It's like working in an observation deck," said the Allsteel dealer. The configuration with the lower panel height addressed their need to create a more teamwork oriented environment. "This is a trend for more collaborative, progressive companies," noted Dru Jordan, Allsteel A & D Specialist. "They wanted to break free from the traditional office space."

In recognition of the resort lifestyle their clients enjoy, their employees now enjoy wardrobes right at their workstations, and they were allowed to customize their personal space by selecting their own work tools from a list provided by the Allsteel dealer.

Separating Allsteel from the competition was the ability of Terrace to be accented from PANTONE® Color System's huge palette, allowing Leisure Care to achieve a unique look, yet keep to their budget. "The great thing about Terrace is you get a very strong, durable frame and tile product at a price point that lets you spend a significant portion of your budget on upgrading finishes," the dealer said.

Terrace works with an almost unlimited range of surface materials to bring your best design ideas to life. It helps clients express a dynamic combination of their style, their brand, their culture and their approach to work.
